

From: Dean Masai
To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 11/20/01 7:06pm
Subject: How to settle the lawsuit

Greetings, U.S. Dept. of Justice:

Splitting up the company is the best thing to do. You can still do it. Do it. How else can you level the software/hardware market "playing field?" That was the purpose of the suit in the first place, correct?

Well, MS has been found to be a monopoly; it's been found guilty of using its monopoly status in unfair business practices. Punish them, just as any other person or business found guilty would be punished. And rectify the situation so that this kind of thing will not happen again. Think of the future for the computer industry and the American (and world) economy. The U.S. Free Enterprise System works best on free market principals. Let the free market decide which software to use. Level the playing field. Donations to political funds should have nothing to do with JUSTICE, so ignore all of MS' political donations and attempts to influence your decision. We, the people, want JUSTICE. Just do it.

Dean Masai